Memory Verse

Isaiah 52:15

So shall he sprinkle many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him: for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider.

Chorus of the Week: Number 77

Oh, children, won't you come to Jesus?
He died for thee,
He suffered on the cross to save you,
Come and be saved and free.

*Children won't you come to Jesus?
Come, oh come today.
You may not see tomorrow's sunrise,
Now is salvation's day.*

Story Time

Molly had moved from Ireland to England to find a job. There she had heard the gospel, and had accepted the Lord Jesus as her own Saviour. She continued to work there for a few months, but she kept thinking about her family back in Ireland. Her mother and father and four brothers were still at home, and even though they went to church every Sunday, she knew they wouldn't hear that they were sinners and that they needed to be saved, because she had been going that church all her life, and she had never heard it there.

"I must go home and tell them," she thought to herself. "They will be glad to hear how they can start on the road to heaven."

Everyone was delighted to welcome Molly home. That evening, as they sat around the fire catching up on all the news, Molly asked them to listen to her wonderful discovery.

"I have got saved," she told them. "That means I am sure that when I die I will be in heaven. And I wanted to come home and tell you all about it."

"What strange talk is that?" asked her mother, while her father and brothers listened quietly. "Sure you have always been a good girl, and we are a good family, and of course we will probably go to heaven."

"I know that's what we thought," replied Molly, "but I have learned what the Bible teaches us about heaven, and how that the Lord Jesus is the Way, the Truth and the Life. We can only come to God through Him. He died on the cross to take the punishment for our sins, and by accepting Him as our Saviour, we can have eternal life."

Molly was surprised at the reaction of her family, as one after another, each member told her she was wrong, and she shouldn't think she knew better than everybody else. The days were busy on the little farm, but night after night, as they sat at the fireside, the talk turned to Molly and her new faith. One of her brothers was very angry with her and argued loudly with her to try and prove she was wrong. Molly didn't know a lot and she couldn't answer all the questions, but she was convinced that the Bible was God's word and she knew she was saved.

One morning her mother called her. "Molly" she said, "If you don't give up talking about the Bible, you will have to go away. This house was always peaceful, and now you have come home with this new way and caused arguments and upset."

"I will go" said Molly, "and I will be praying for you all here at home, because I am telling you the truth." So Molly sadly packed her bags again and went back to where she had heard the gospel. As she had promised, she prayed for her family every day that the Lord would save each one of them.

Just like Molly's family, many people laugh or get angry when they hear the gospel. They think they can get to heaven their own way, by doing the best they can. But the Bible is clear that trusting the Lord Jesus is the only way to heaven, and we can never get there by our own efforts.

For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast.

Ephesians 2:8,9
